THE FAIR TRIAL. Monday evening's telegrams brought us the astounding intelligence that the trial of Mrs. Fair terminated in a verdict of acquittal. That twelve men could be found in California either foolish or wicked enough to refuse to punish a criminal guilty of so heinous a crime is both astounding and alarming. The only logical conclusion to be drawn from this unexampled proceeding is that when any adulteress or mistress of a married man finds that her victim is beginning to tire of her and desires to return to the wife of his bosom as his truest friend and best companion, then the abandoned harlot has a right to kill her former paramour because he ceases to break the laws of God and man and clings to his lawful wife in preference to a courtesan. It is not worth while to relate or comment upon the connection between the unfortunate Mr. Crittenden and the woman who slew him or the circumstances surrounding the homicide-they are too well known-but with them fresh in the minds of all, who cannot but feel that the absolute impotency of the law to reach great criminals is a misfortune fraught with the gravest consequences? No family in the land is safe if the evils of the temptress have led the husband and father astray. For him there is no repentance; no return to the forsaken paths of virtue; for if he does abjure his sin and bid the lewd woman retire, he does so at the peril of his life; for his discarded mistress may, like Mrs. Fair, deliberately slay the dupe who had slipped or was slipping from her grasp, and a jury of her countrymen will say that she is guilty of no crime, sending her forth to seek another paramour and perhaps commit another murder. What must the wife of the murdered man think of the laws of her country that permit an unchaste woman to first entrap her husband into the toils of sin and the moment he attempts to escape to murder him and still be declared innocent of any crime? Yet this has been done in a country that professes christianity, boasting laws to protect the innocent and punish the evil-doer. How imperfectly this is carried into effect the verdict in the Fair trial will be a constant witness.

THE great secret of the strongth of the Republican organizization is its intelli-gence; its strongholds are in its school houses and churches. - [Pioche Review.

This is news indeed. We thought its strongest hold was on the National Treasury and several million of ignorant negroes, who do not possess intelligence enough to know that they are the dunes of the Radical rogues who lead them. At the same time, as the Radicals claim by implication to engross all the intelligence, schools and churches in the country, we cannot but regret that they did not apply the first to some other purpose than to teaching in their schools nothing but "addition, division and silence," according to the approved Penusylvania method; and last that they failed to learn that cruelty, hatred, malice and theft are not enumerated in the list of christian virtues. Judging from the treatment of the South for the past seven years, and the general stealing that has been going on for a longer period, we cannot but think that the Radicals have not been regular church attendants, or else their ministers must have been of the Parson Brownlow order

THE HOME TRUTHS that Mr. Greelev has been telling in his late speeches annoy the Grant radicals horribly. They cannot deny the facts that old Horace insists upon putting before the people-so they vent their spite in ridicule and abuse. This will not win, and they know it, and it is that conviction that gets their dander up so furiously. The President and his foctmen (we do not mean the darkeys who wear a white livery at Long Branch) had better have thought of this in time and not by incapacity and wrong-doing have rendered themselves so obnoxious to criticism.

THE Democratic Convention of Lander county met at Austin on the 29th ult., and nominated Geo. W. Cassidy for Senator, Judge Hupp, J. H. Burgess. A. E. Titus and — Henley for Assembly; J. F. Roberts for Clerk, and A. Skillman for Sheriff.

President Thiers is giving his attention to elaborate reports prepared from French representations with regard to the workings of constitutional government. If President Grant had devoted some of his time to the same subject his administration might not have presented quite such a dismal record.

We learn that the Manhatten mill at Austin has produced in the last nine months $979,065.

"LET US HAVE AN HONEST DEAL."

This is the somewhat grotesque but pointed title of an article in the San Francisco Chronicle, in which that paper contends that the people of that city shall have a fair chance to express their wishes on the railway subsidies and the city government generally. This was all right enough, but it struck us as rather singular that the Chronicle wished to confine the fair dealing to the limited area of the city and county of San Francisco. What is good as a general principle of popular government would apply with equal force to national affairs as well as municipal. Why can we not have a little of the "square deal" applied to the latter? Why is it that the Administration is allowed to exercise the mighty power of place, backed by the U. S. Treasury, to secure the election of a man who has shown himself incompetent in every way to fill the great office with which he has unfortunately been entrusted? Why cannot American citizens be allowed to exercise their privileges as electors without the interference and intimidation of Federal officials and Federal bayonets? Why are the Radical Governors of certain States allowed to appoint all the officers of registry or election, to control the registry and refuse or accept qualified voters just as whim, interest or prejudice may dictate? In short, why the course recommended by a Radical journal as fitting to be pursued in a municipal election should not be applicable to that for the highest office in the gift of the people is hard to tell. Here is the advice of the Chronicle:

"Let them stand upon their merits; but let there be no bribery; no tampering with votes or returns. Let us consider the proposition coolly and temperately; let us vote understandingly; and after an onest result is obtained, let the minority abide that result."

If the Camerons, the Conklings, and the other valets de place of the President were to do this, and he were to do likewise, we believe it would do more to restore the era of good feeling than all the suspensions of habeas corpus, Ku Klux Acts and the other pet appliances of the odious carpet-baggers. But this is where the trouble lies: Grant and his followers dare not do it. They know, well know, that if a fair expression of the yopular will is ever obtained, out they go, carpetbaggers and all. With them it is a struggle for life or death. They do not care for their party or their country; all their attention is devoted to their miserable selves, and so long as their personal ends are gratified all the rest can shift for itself. They are aware of all this, and therefore every officer of the Government, from the President to a negro Postmaster, is pressed into service. Place preferments and the national purse are held out as baits to the wavering. Frauds of the most gigantic character are unhesitatingly resorted to, and when these will not answer intimidation and actual force will take their place; the last most certainly will occur in all the Southern States. So our friend the Chronicle will find that the great obstacles in the way of the " fair deal " are the man and his supporters, whose re-election to the chief magistracy of the nation that paper so earnestly advocates.

The Toledo (Ohio) Blade boasts the possession of a "Jenkins" who has been interviewing the President at Long Branch, and who made the important discovery that Grant's bull pups are Newfoundland dogs and the President has two colored servents who wear white livery; all of which interesting facts are set forth in detail for the delectation of the good people of Ohio. No doubt when Grant assumes the state and style of autocrat this literary flunkey will be promoted to the position of Jenkins-in-Chief to the Court.

Our neighbor, the Review, goes after Gen'l Banks with a stick reduced to a point of wonderful accuteness. If Banks had supported Grant it is probable the Review would not have contemplated Banks exactly in that light. It is a good thing that he will probably never see the Review, otherwise he might feel bad, for that influential journal reproves him in terribly severe terms for preferring "brains to shoulder straps," as Tom Fitch said.

The oldest inhabitant has been reading a series of articles upon the adulturation of liquors, and has arrived at a somewhat singular conclusion. The analyses of those liquors showed an average of about 65 of water to 35 of spirits. "They don't give the spirits a fair chance," said the aged Bacchanal, "they'll keep on fooling with water till it depopulates the earth again."

Two Peensylvania women called for their husbands at a bar-room the other evening. One broke a pitcher over her husband's head, the other satisfied herself with doing the same for two deeanters, but made up for it by throwing the cat and her kittens into a barrel of cider; these little bursts of playfulness over, they took their husbands to their quiet
